

Harbourline Energy Co.

Code of Business Conduct

How we work safely, honestly and fairly

Field	Value
Document ID	HR-POL-001
Version	5.1
Effective date	2025-01-15
Policy owner	Andrew Kim, General Counsel
Approved by	Board of Directors, Harbourline Energy Co.
Applies to	All employees, officers, directors and contractors of Harbourline Energy Co.
Next scheduled review	2026-01-15

1. Purpose

Harbourline delivers an essential public service. Customers, regulators such as the Ontario Energy Board and state public service commissions, and our communities rely on us to act with integrity. This Code sets the minimum standard of conduct expected from everyone who works for or on behalf of Harbourline.

2. Scope

The Code applies to all employees, officers and directors in Canada and the United States, and to contractors and consultants while they perform work for Harbourline. Where local law sets a higher standard, the higher standard applies.

3. Definitions

Term	Meaning
Conflict of interest	A situation where a personal interest could influence, or appear to influence, a business decision.
Gift or hospitality	Anything of value received or given, including meals, tickets, travel and discounts.
Related party	A family member, household member or a business in which you or they hold a financial interest.
Retaliation	Any adverse action taken against a person for raising a concern in good faith.

4. Standards of Conduct

4.1 Safety first

No task is so urgent that it cannot be done safely. Every employee has the right and the duty to stop work that is unsafe. Working under the influence of alcohol, cannabis or impairing drugs is prohibited.

4.2 Conflicts of interest

Employees must disclose actual, potential or perceived conflicts of interest on the Conflict of Interest Disclosure Form (COI-01) within 10 business days of becoming aware of them. Employees may not approve purchases, contracts or hiring decisions involving a related party.

4.3 Gifts and hospitality

Gifts and hospitality valued above CAD 100 (Canada) or USD 75 (United States) must be declared in the Gifts and Hospitality Register within 5 business days of receipt. Cash, gift cards and securities may never be accepted. Employees involved in an active procurement may not accept any gift from a bidder.

4.4 Regulatory integrity

Information submitted to the Ontario Energy Board, NERC, FERC or a state public service commission must be complete and accurate. Employees must not share non-public transmission or market information with affiliates in breach of the Affiliate Relationships Code or FERC Standards of Conduct.

4.5 Respectful workplace

Harassment, discrimination and violence are prohibited. See the Workplace Harassment Prevention Policy (HR-POL-031) for complaint and investigation procedures.

4.6 Protecting information and assets

Company systems, vehicles, tools and data are for business use. Customer personal information is handled in line with the Privacy Policy and may only be accessed when needed for your role.

5. Raising Concerns

Employees may raise concerns with their manager, Human Resources, the Legal department, or the independent Ethics Hotline, which is available 24 hours a day at 1-888-555-0142 or ethics.harbourline.example. Reports may be made anonymously.

Harbourline does not tolerate retaliation. Anyone who retaliates against a person who raised a concern in good faith is subject to discipline up to and including termination.

6. Annual Attestation

All employees must complete the annual Code of Conduct training and attestation in the learning system by February 28 each year. New employees complete it within 30 days of their start date. Signed paper acknowledgements are scanned and filed in the HR-Policies library.

7. Roles and Responsibilities

Role	Responsibility
Every employee	Follows the Code, completes annual attestation, raises concerns.
People leaders	Model the Code, respond to concerns promptly, never retaliate.
Legal department	Owns the Code, administers the Ethics Hotline, reports to the Audit Committee quarterly.
Human Resources	Tracks completion of attestations and applies discipline consistently.
